BOOKS – THE OTHER CHANNEL

The Books-the-Other Channel book discussion group will be discussing Oil by Upton Sinclair on Tuesday, October 26th at 6:30 p.m. in the lower level of the Demmer Library.

This novel originates from the 'Teapot Dome' oil scandal of President Warren Harding as oil barons bribe politicians. It is about greed and the oil boom of Southern California in the 1920's. It is wrapped up in evangelic crusades by shifty preachers and leftist labor activists. "Oil" is a provoking novel as a man and his son plunge into the oil drilling business and all that they do and what is around them. Bunny the son becomes a 'red millionaire' and is a radical strike leader. The 2007 highly acclaimed movie "There Will Be Blood" directed by Paul Thomas Anderson and starring Daniel Day-Lewis is an adaptation of Sinclair's Oil!

Week Activities

Week 2010 – and we’re celebrating for longer than one week. We have two activities for teens to participate in this year. Teens in grades six through twelfth can participate in the WWE WrestleMania Reading Challenge, where one winner will be drawn from the nationwide entries to win tickets to WrestleMania 27 in Atlanta, GA. This contest involves a pledge to read five books between October 16th, 2010 and April 11th, 2011 as well as drawing a picture or a bookmark. Everyone who picks up a pledge sheet at the library front desk, will get a WWE mini-poster and trading cards. All the details on this contest are posted in the YA area of the library.

We also have Wii gaming going on after school on certain days for teens in grades six through twelfth. The games available to play here are Carnival Games Mini Golf, Rock Band 2, and Wii Sports Resort. Snacks will be provided during gaming days. The specific dates and times are:

Tuesday, October 12th 3:30 p.m. – 4:30 p.m.
Thursday, October 14th 3:30 p.m. – 4:30 p.m.
Tuesday, October 19th 3:30 p.m. – 4:30 p.m.
Thursday, October 21st 3:30p.m. – 4:30 p.m.

ate Family History Month !

Your Family Heritage by Kimberly Powell, About.com Guide

October is designated in many U.S. States as "Family History Month," and genealogists everywhere have adopted the month as their own. Whether you're new to genealogy, or have devoted a lifetime to it, celebrate Family History Month with your family this October by trying one (or more) of these ten wonderful ways to craft and commemorate your past.

1. Get Started Tracing Your Family Tree

If you have been curious about your family tree but just aren't sure where to start then you don't have any more excuses. There is a great collection of resources and simple advice on how to get started researching your family tree both on and off the Internet.

2. Create a Family Cookbook

A perfect recipe for family history, a cookbook of collected heirloom recipes is a wonderful way to preserve memories of favorite meals shared with family. Contact your parents, grandparents, and other relatives and ask them to send you a few of their favorite family recipes. Have them include a story about each dish, where or who it was handed down from, why it is a family favorite, and when it was traditionally eaten (Christmas, family reunions, etc.). Whether you create a full-blown family cookbook, or just make copies for family and friends - this is a gift that will be cherished forever.

3. Record Family Stories

Every family has its own history - the events, personalities, and traditions that make the family unique - and collecting these singular stories and memories is one of the most meaningful ways you and your family can honor your older relatives and preserve family traditions. Recording family stories on audiotape, videotape, or in legacy journals, brings family members closer together, bridges generation gaps, and ensures that your family stories will be preserved for future generations.

4. Uncover Your Family Health History

Also known as medical genealogy, tracing your family health history is a fun, and potentially lifesaving, project. Experts state that about 3000 of the 10,000 known diseases have genetic links, and that many diseases "run in families," including colon cancer, heart disease, alcoholism, and high blood pressure. Creating a family health history can be a useful tool to aid you and your medical care provider in interpreting patterns of health, illness and genetic traits for you and your descendants. What you learn now could potentially save a family member's life tomorrow.

5. Take a Trip Back in Time

Grab a map, and hop in the car for a family adventure! A fun way to celebrate your family history is to visit sites of importance to your family - the old family homestead, the house where you were born, the country from which your ancestors migrated, the hillside where you played as a child, or the cemetery where great-grandpa is buried. If none of these locations is near to your home, then consider a trip to a historical museum, battlefield, or re-enactment event that relates to the history of your family.

6. Scrapbook Your Family Heritage

The perfect place to showcase and protect your precious family photos, heirlooms, and memories, a heritage scrapbook album is wonderful way to document your family's history and create a lasting gift for future generations. While it may seem a daunting task when faced with boxes of dusty old photos, scrapbooking is actually both fun and more easy than you might think!

7. Start a Family Web Site

If your extended family, like mine, relies on email to stay in touch, then a family Web site may be for you. Serving as a digital scrapbook and meeting spot, a family Web site allows you and your kids to share family photos, favorite recipes, funny stories, and even your family tree research. If you or someone in your family is a Web designer, by all means go to town. If you're more of a beginner, however, don't worry - there are plenty of free online services that make creating a family Web site a snap!

8. Preserve Your Family Pictures

Make this the month that you finally get the family photos out of the shoeboxes or bags in the back of your closet; track down the photo you've never seen of your great-grandparents; or ask your Grandma to help you put names to the faces of all of those unmarked photos in your family album. Try your hand at scanning them into your computer, or hire someone to do it for you, and then store the originals in acid-free photo boxes or albums. Same thing goes for the family movies! Then share some of your photo finds with the family, by creating a family photo calendar or a family photo book!

9. Get the Next Generation Involved

Most children will learn to appreciate their family history if you turn it into a detective game. Start your children or grandchildren on a lifelong journey of discovery by introducing them to genealogy. Here are some wonderful projects to do with your children this month including games, family history and heritage projects and online lessons. Teach Your Children to Be Ancestor Detectors

10. Craft a Heritage Gift

From picture frame Christmas ornaments to heritage quilts, your family history makes a great gift! Homemade gifts are often inexpensive but are favorites with the recipients. They don't have to be anything complicated either. Something as simple as a framed photo of a favorite ancestor can bring tears to someone's eyes. Best of all, making a family heritage gift is often more fun than giving one!

Family History Month!

Interested in family history? The Demmer Library can help you get started. The Demmer Library's Local History and Genealogy Room has genealogical research sources available for the beginner and the experienced researcher. Local history resources, such as THE PINE, PLOW AND PIONEER, volumes 1 and 2 are available for checkout, as well as, writings by local Three Lakes residents, Sam Campbell, Walt Goldsworthy, Carl Marty and Ed Epler. Histories of Oneida County, Sugar Camp, and Rhinelander are also available.

Books about the various aspects of the hobby listed on page 6 can be found in the items with the genealogy stickers on them and information about Wisconsin, Three Lakes, and surrounding communities can be found in the items with Wisconsin stickers on them.

The local genealogical society, the Three Lakes Genealogical Society, meets monthly to help and encourage new and veteran researchers alike. Pick up an application in the Local History and Genealogy Room or ask the librarian at the front desk for more information.

The Demmer Library is a Family History Center, a branch of the Family History Library in Salt Lake City, UT. This allows the staff to order microfilm and microfiche from the Family History Library for use by patrons at the library.

And last but not least, the staff of the Demmer Library is ready to assist you with your family history research needs. Inquire today!
